FROM THE EAST

Brethren,

Masonic etiquette is a topic that is not often discussed but its significance should not be overlooked. These are the written and unwritten rules of behavior within the lodge during a tiled communication.

We are told not to walk between the Worshipful Master and the altar. The reasoning behind this is to not break "the light" between the Bible and the Worshipful Master in the East. It does happen during ritual and balloting via the Senior Deacon but only then.

When balloting we perform the due guard to the ballot box, not to the Worshipful Master. After depositing your ballot you should exit to the left between the Senior Deacon and the altar and return to your seat. Only members of the lodge holding the ballot have the right to vote.

When addressing the Worshipful Master, rise and wait to be acknowledged. When the Worshipful Master addresses you, perform the due guard to the Worshipful Master and address him accordingly. The due guard is dropped and you may make your point. When finished, again perform the due guard and thank the Worshipful Master. During an open conversation, the Worshipful Master should be addressed before speaking with another brother.

If you arrive late to lodge, the Tiler will inform the Worshipful Master of a brother who has been avouched for. When entering the lodge advanced to the altar, perform the due guard and apologize to the Worshipful Master for being tardy. He will then ask you to take a seat with the brethren.

In the event of having to excuse yourself from lodge early; rise, when the Worshipful Master acknowledges you perform the due guard and ask to be excused. When exiting, advance to the altar, perform the due guard and wait for the Worshipful Master to permit you to retire.

These simple rules of Masonic etiquette are not meant to place anyone's status above another but rather show respect to the institution we hold so dear. When visiting other lodges, these rules will prove your commitment to the peace and harmony of Freemasonry.

Dean Frederick Jones
Worshipful Master

Sincerely and fraternally,
Dean Frederick Jones
Worshipful Master, 2018
